

Equity, Diversity, Inclusion & Indigeneity

Our Commitment

Bluewater Health honours the diversity of the individuals who work here and seek care here. Our diverse cultures, race, ethnic origin and colour, religion, gender, sexual orientations, age, ability, steeped in a multitude of beliefs systems and traditions are what have been linked to better care and improved health outcomes.

Bluewater Health recognizes and acknowledges that individuals who seek care, and who provide care, in our hospital have experienced various forms of racism and discrimination over time.

Everyone at Bluewater Health has the right to feel safe and respected both in the workplace and while accessing equitable care.

Deliberate or covert acts of racism, sexism, homophobia, transphobia, ageism, and ableism, as well as other forms of discrimination, will not be tolerated at Bluewater Health.

We are also committed to Reconciliation with Anishnaabe, Metis, and Inuit people based on trust and mutual respect and improving Indigenous healthcare experiences now and into the future.

As a hospital community we commit to continually addressing structural and systemic barriers in support of a more inclusive and accessible path to patient care and for our employees, professional staff and volunteers' experience.

Together, we aspire to shape a hospital community where everyone can say:
"I Belong"
